No responsibility can be taken for the above information. The municipalities may make changes.

1) Upper limit of the relevant income for subsidized fee

The municipalities have different subsidy models. The upper limit of the relevant income is between CHF 70,000 and CHF 120,000, depending on the municipality's decision.

The relevant income is based on the total taxable income plus 10% of the taxable assets over CHF 100,000 (basis: cantonal and municipal tax, tax assessment by the canton of Zug).

Compensation measures to absorb the consequences of the tax law amendment According to the decision of the Social Director's Conference of the Canton of Zug, the tax relief of CHF 9,200 (multi-person tax rate) resp. of CHF 4,600 (basic tax rate) is added to the relevant income for tax assessments from 2023.

2) Child's age when starting with the child-minder

Certain municipalities restrict the age a child may start with a childminder as follows: Primary school children who were not with a child-minder prior to starting school may not be accepted into the subsidized child-minding care if the school offers childcare at the same level.

3) Maximal level of care

Certain municipalities link the amount of subsidy to the parental level of employment. As an example: Total parental employment is 120% this leads to the right for a 20% care (one day) with a childminder. Employment is considered as being equivalent to :

- a) Completion of a recognised education or training course,
- b) Participation in an integration course from social services,
- c) Social security recipients (unemployment benefit),
- d) Special circumstances as agreed with the municipality.

All details and definitions regarding scope of care, age and subsidy model are available in the Childminding Regulations and in the Fee Regulations.
